SPIRITUAL TRIAGE

Yesterday, as we were finishing lunch, my youngest daughter walked over to my seat and sat on my lap before we finished our meal. As she sat there, I noticed that the scar above her eyebrow had practically vanished. As you may know, a little over a year ago, my youngest son was practicing his "swordsmanship" with his plastic sword. As he was slaying dragons and other imaginary threats to his family, he made a mighty swing of his sword and connected just above the eyebrow of his unsuspecting sister who happened to walk around the corner. The result was a wide, one inch gash that needed medical attention.

We hurriedly took our daughter to the emergency room, only to discover that we had a long wait in front of us. A triage nurse evaluated our daughter, and we waited for two hours while other people, with more serious injuries, were treated first. Objectively, I know that's the way the emergency room works, and that's the way I want it to work, except this was my little girl!

So while we sat and waited, I couldn't help but think of how we may need to have a little "spiritual triage" applied to our lives. I sometimes must wonder if we place emphasis on wrong things. I wonder if we could be found treating scratches and bruises while there are other injuries that threaten our spiritual lives and we leave these injuries untreated. Not every command in God's word carries the same weight. Now, I didn't say that, Jesus did (Matthew 23:23). Of course, that is not to minimize some commandments, but it does teach the priority of others.

The Pharisees practiced tithing, as the law commanded and as they should. But apparently, they had neglected such things as mercy, justice, and faith. In the Old Testament book of Hosea, the prophet said that the knowledge of God was more important than burnt offerings (Hosea 6:6). Isn't that interesting? Why, that's exactly opposite of what people think today. Modern thinking is that if I "go to church" I'm okay, even if I don't open my Bible through the week. While "going to church" is something you should do, increasing your knowledge of God is better.

Friends, make sure your priorities are right. Don't major in the minors. Take a little time to evaluate your priorities and do a little spiritual triage on yourself. You might just find that you've been treating scratches and bruises, when you have more critical needs to attend.

A minister for a small church was so poorly paid that he began to look for part-time work to help support his family. He saw an ad in the newspaper for a worker at the local zoo.

He applied and was told by the zoo manager, "The black bear has always been one of our prime attractions, but he died a week ago. We want someone to come in just three or our days a week, dress as a black bear, and entertain the kids."

The preacher got the job, and he made a good bear. He'd growl and run around the bear cage, and everyone thought he was a real bear.

One day he decided to climb the tree like a bear. The kids loved it. Unfortunately, the fake tree was not properly secured. It tilted over and the bear fell into the lion's den.

The lion pounced on the bear. The clawing, biting lion was too much for the bear. The preacher decided the only way he was going to survive was to hug the lion as tightly as he could. He squeezed so hard that the lion could hardly breathe.

The lion gasping for air finally said, "Ease up, brother! You're not the only underpaid preacher in this town!"

The Touch of Gold

Offering a prize for the best definition of money, a London paper awarded it to a young man who sent in the following definition:

"An article which may be used as a universal passport to everywhere except heaven, and a universal provider of everything except happiness."

An old timer is one who remembers when people aimed to get to heaven instead of the moon.

What would men be without women? Scarce, sir...mighty scarce.

Our journey across the seas of life becomes more pleasant when we scrape off the barnacles of doubt, fear, worry and pessimism.

There was a barber that thought that he should share his faith with his customers more that he had been doing lately. So the next morning when the sun came up he got out of bed he said, "Today I am going to witness to the first man that walks through my door."

Soon after he opened his shop the first man came in and said, "I want a shave!" The barber went in the back and prayed a quick desperate prayer saying, "God, give me the wisdom to know just the right thing to say to this man."

Then quickly the barber came out with his straight razor in one hand and a Bible in the other while saying "GOOD MORNING, SIR. I HAVE A QUESTION FOR YOU...ARE YOU READY TO DIE?"
